

Conservation Never Goes Out of Season 🌸🌸

The summer sun is out in full force, and this means both temperatures and outdoor water use is on the rise. It is important to use water responsibility 365 days a year, but the summer months require extra attention on outdoor usage.

We understand life is busy, and conservation can fall from focus. That's why we want to share some quick and easy tips to help you conserve as the season changes.

- Water your lawn early in the morning or late at night
- Utilize pool covers to help minimize evaporation
- Surround your plant and shrub roots with two to four inches of mulch to reduce evaporation and regulate soil temperature
- Aerate your lawn to help it retain more moisture and prevent wasteful water runoff

Liberty Utilities also offers numerous resources to help you understand your water usage and improve your water-use efficiency.
